Term 3: Week 9
September 9th, 2014

Hi everyone,

Term Three is drawing to a close and what a jam-packed term it’s been!

Last Saturday Mr Stewart and I attended the Sarina Festival and sold raffle tickets. It’s always interesting to hear the comments of the people who stop to buy a ticket and have a chat. Many of them have fond memories of having attended our school themselves whilst others are just keen to help small schools. The model train that the kids made last Friday was an eye-catcher and a great visual to show people the size of our school. I think it is our school’s uniqueness that captures the hearts of ticket buyers. So ……. well done to the kids and staff for an imaginative way of portraying our school student body.

I’ve been meaning to bring a website to everyone’s attention; Kidsmatter has some amazing articles on its site and is even available on Facebook if you are a social media follower. Next time you are browsing, just have a glance and see what’s being discussed; it has great parenting tips, safety tips and general information for families.

I’m looking forward to the soccer carnival on Friday. I have noticed a big improvement in the kids’ skills over the term and they should have a great day. Hope to catch up with you if you are able to come along in support.

Until next term,

Hi everyone,

Term Three is drawing to a close and what a jam-packed term it’s been!

Last Saturday Mr Stewart and I attended the Sarina Festival and sold raffle tickets. It’s always interesting to hear the comments of the people who stop to buy a ticket and have a chat. Many of them have fond memories of having attended our school themselves whilst others are just keen to help small schools. The model train that the kids made last Friday was an eye-catcher and a great visual to show people the size of our school. I think it is our school’s uniqueness that captures the hearts of ticket buyers. So ……. well done to the kids and staff for an imaginative way of portraying our school student body.

I’ve been meaning to bring a website to everyone’s attention; Kidsmatter has some amazing articles on its site and is even available on Facebook if you are a social media follower. Next time you are browsing, just have a glance and see what’s being discussed; it has great parenting tips, safety tips and general information for families.

I’m looking forward to the soccer carnival on Friday. I have noticed a big improvement in the kids’ skills over the term and they should have a great day. Hope to catch up with you if you are able to come along in support.

Until next term,

Hi everyone,

Term Three is drawing to a close and what a jam-packed term it’s been!

Last Saturday Mr Stewart and I attended the Sarina Festival and sold raffle tickets. It’s always interesting to hear the comments of the people who stop to buy a ticket and have a chat. Many of them have fond memories of having attended our school themselves whilst others are just keen to help small schools. The model train that the kids made last Friday was an eye-catcher and a great visual to show people the size of our school. I think it is our school’s uniqueness that captures the hearts of ticket buyers. So ……. well done to the kids and staff for an imaginative way of portraying our school student body.

I’ve been meaning to bring a website to everyone’s attention; Kidsmatter has some amazing articles on its site and is even available on Facebook if you are a social media follower. Next time you are browsing, just have a glance and see what’s being discussed; it has great parenting tips, safety tips and general information for families.

I’m looking forward to the soccer carnival on Friday. I have noticed a big improvement in the kids’ skills over the term and they should have a great day. Hope to catch up with you if you are able to come along in support.

Until next term,
